Introduction of the Seminar

India, often called Vishal Bharat, is not just a large country in terms of land, but also a nation with a very rich and continuous cultural and intellectual history. For thousands of years, India has developed a unique system of knowledge known as Bhartiya Gyan Parampara (Indian Knowledge Tradition). This system includes many areas such as philosophy, science, art, education, governance, and spirituality, all connected in a balanced and meaningful way.

In today's modern and global world, people are facing many serious challenges like environmental problems, ethical confusion, mental stress, and social and economic inequalities. In this context, it has become important to look back at our traditional knowledge and understand their values. As Bhartiya Gyan Parampara teaches us how to live in harmony with nature, follow ethical values, and maintain a balance between material success and inner peace.

The idea of Vishal Bharat is not limited to geography; it reflects India's vision and potential of becoming a Vishwa Guru, or a guide for the world through knowledge and wisdom. Ancient texts like the Vedas and Upanishads, along with Ayurveda, Yoga, and the Arthashastra, show advanced and holistic nature of Indian knowledge traditions. These sources guide us towards overall development that includes both physical, mental and spiritual well-being.

This seminar aims to bring together students, scholars, academicians, industries and policymakers to discuss the importance of Indian knowledge traditions in the present era. It will provide a platform to share ideas and understand how these traditions can help in building a better society.

The seminar will also explore how traditional knowledge can be used in areas like education, sustainable development, and national growth. Further, it seeks to connect the wisdom of the past with the needs of the present to show how India’s knowledge traditions can play an important role in creating a balanced, ethical, and progressive future for the country and the world at large.
